ETHIOPIAN GOVT DEPRESSED OVER HOARE'S DECISION

Authorities Resigned To An Indefinite Prolongation
of War

REDOUBLED EFFORTS

British Government Stands
Pat On Foreign Policy
Set Forth

By H. R. Knickerbocker

(Copyright, 1935, by I. N. S.)

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 23.—The Ethiopian government is deeply depressed by Sir Samuel Hoare's declaration in London that military sanctions against Italy are impossible and today Ethiopian authorities are resigned to an indefinite prolongation of the war which they are convinced can only be stopped by British warships. Nobody here believes that economic sanctions could be effective or that France will act with England, so that British Foreign Minister's question of whether advocates of closing the Suez Canal wish England to act single-handedly is taken here to mean that England will not act.

Feeling they are left on their own resources, the Ethiopians redoubled their own efforts and today an additional 10,000 trekked to the front where the Italians apparently are stagnating.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 23.—The British government today stood pat on the foreign policy as set forth by Sir Samuel Hoare yesterday and waited for official Roman reaction to the Foreign Minister's plea for speedy peace while opposition parties in the House of Commons criticized the government's stand.

First Rome dispatches indicating that the speech pleased Italian official circles, were welcomed by British diplomatic circles. Many believed that Sir Samuel's appeal to Premier Benito Mussolini to come to terms before economic sanctions became effective, may be followed by diplomatic action to bring the speech to the Duce's personal attention. At the moment, however, the government feels that Premier Laval of France is in charge of peace moves and is unwilling to do anything likely to embarrass the French statesman's feelers.

LONDON, England, Oct. 23.—Pushing steadily northward through the mountains of the Somaliland front where native irregulars are bearing the brunt of the offensives, Italian forces today faced stern Ethiopian opposition at the fortified citadel of Gorrabel.

Exchange Telegraph dispatches here confirmed the capture of the nearby fortified town of Giale in a stiff encounter in which 20 Abyssinians were killed and wounded. But Reuter's agency from Addis Ababa said that orders had been issued to the commander of the Gorrabel garrison to hold his position there at all costs. The actual garrison is believed not to exceed 1,000, but ample reserves are nearby to rush to the support of the city.

Ethiopian plans, according to Reuter's call for destruction of the Gorrabel radio station, if it is seen that fall of the fort is inevitable, then a fight to the death.

Exchange Telegraph also reported a concentration of Italian armored cars had successfully penetrated deep into the Bulei Valley, overwhelming and capturing several groups of Abyssinians.

TWENTY PER CENT OF GOAL IN THE COUNTY BOY SCOUT DRIVE HAS BEEN RECEIVED; CAMPAIGN SECTIONS COMPLETING SOLICITOR ORGANIZATIONS

Every Item of Budget Needed;
Sum of $10,000 is Sought

DIRECTORS MEET

President Roberts, Southampton, Is In Charge of The Session

Radiating enthusiasm for scouting and its need in Bucks County, 18 men gathered Monday evening in the Doylestown Inn, Doylestown, during the regular bi-monthly meeting of the scouting executive board. Six of the men were guests of the board. They were sectional chairmen, Thomas Lewis, Perkasie; W. Laurence Mason, Doylestown; Andrew Y. Michie, Jr., New Britain; Robert Shaw, Solebury section; Henry Palmer, Jr., Langhorne; and Frederick Bebbington, Yardley.

Twenty per cent of the goal of $10,000 has been received. All of the 19 campaign sections are just completing their organization of solicitors. Past President Thomas Ross, Doylestown, expressed the sentiment of all those present in his statement: "All of us are working hard for our boys. Every item in our budget is needed. The funds needed to organize scouting among 250 additional boys during 1936 is worth all of our effort. The amount we are asking throughout the county is not a large sum, and should be quickly raised in the next three weeks."

President C. Wilson Roberts, Southampton, said, "With every solicitor under his respective sectional chairman seeing his prospects, we can, and we will put this campaign over. The success of the campaign will be reflected in by the work of the solicitors. We have just started, and I am confident Bucks County will do the right thing for its boys."

Reports of people in the giving of larger sums of money for the 1936 campaign, and more people being seen were reflected by the comments of the above sectional chairmen. Asher Biehn, Quakertown, is getting better support, and response than ever before. "Al" Hendricks, Sellersville, reports his community will "go over the top." The Riegelsville section is just getting started with the combined efforts of district commissioner Arthur

W. Osborne, Rev. Kirk, Rev. Neikirk, Neighborhood Commissioner Harry Weisel and Andrew Keiffer. Lewis Fetherolf, Milford, has his organization completed, and is seeing all prospects and many new ones. Peter Hellberg, Chalfont, has his men under way, and will be coming through with a complete report in the next few days. Dependable "Clint" Oblinger, New Hope, is contacting every person in his home town.

In the lower end of the county, the sectional chairmen are doing effective work, and all of the communities were completely organized Monday evening. Paul V. Forster, Bristol, has a "live wire" organization stepping along with real assistance from Walter W. Pitonka and District Commissioner "Herb" Pettit. George Knoll, Andalusia, has given a fine progress report from his section. The energetic work of the Morrisville Rotary Club, led by "Marty" Flock, is coming through with their quota. "Doc" Strathie has his Newtown men doing the usual fine work.

County Campaign Chairman, Hon. Hiram H. Keller, was very complimentary of the devoted efforts of the two volunteer campaign organizers, County Boy Scout Commissioner Wm. Burgess, Jr., Morrisville, and Finance Chairman Edmund H. Lovett, Yardley. Working without any compensation, the two men have saved Bucks County citizens many dollars through their volunteering their time to organize the campaign, each year. They have saved the Scouting Council from having to employ a professional concern.

$1277.78 had to be spent in 1935 at Buccoo to provide sufficient cots, tents, reserve water supply system, paint, lumber, hardware, tools, sewage pit, toilet seats, and to repair the damage to the camp road by the heavy rains of July. Camp Chairman Edward W. Fell reported hundreds of hours of devoted work done by the Scouts and Scouters from all parts of the county in the effort to make the camp habitable after three years of nothing for maintenance or replacement.

The entire council membership is invited to attend the Princeton-Lehigh football game on Saturday, November 16th, through an invitation extended by Activities Chairman Thomas Ross. Arthur M. Eastburn, camping chairman, announced the annual Order of the Arrow, camp honor brotherhood to be held at Buccoo beginning with Saturday.

TO ASK FOR BIDS TO IMPROVE WATER PLANT

Morrisville Ready To Start
Revamping of Entire Plant

PLAN 6 MONTHS' WORK

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 23.—Bids for alterations and improvements to the water works and filtration plant here will be advertised for this week and it is expected work on the revamping of the plant will be under way early in December. Six months time is expected to be consumed to complete the job.

The improvement will be a WPA project with the borough receiving about $19,000 as a grant toward the cost. The remainder of the necessary money will be raised by a bond issue.

The plans for this work call for a new brick and concrete building, new and larger pumps, enlargement of two filter beds, two new settling basins, new chemical room and mixing chamber, enlarging of clear water wells and changing of pipe lines. The plans also call for the use of Morrisville labor on the project.

The present plant has a capacity of about 900,000 gallons while the improvements will make the plant have a capacity of a million and a half gallons daily.

The State Board of Health has for many years been insisting that Morrisville Borough do something toward improving the filtration plant. It was claimed the present plant was not large enough to do the work of filtration called upon to do. Lack of funds caused Common Council to postpone this work until the WPA offered 45% of the cost. With the enlargement of the filter, clear water and settling beds the plant will be made adequate for the borough's needs for some years to come, it is reported.

Common Council had considered the question of drilled wells for the supply of water and one test was made but the supply was found to be unfavorable. Several of the councilmen wanted a second test made to prove conclusively whether the well supply would be adequate but the majority of the Councilmen felt it was dangerous to delay any longer for fear of losing the grant from the government. Councilmen John Bleasdale and Councilman Frank Hibbs insisted that a test should be made in the far southern end of the borough so that the question of whether well water could be available be settled for all time. They stated that with only one test this question would always be in doubt and the $300 spent on this one test was really wasted.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE —FOR— COUNTY COMMISSIONER BUCKS COUNTY

Joseph D. Baker, backed by an experienced knowledge of the operation of the governmental and fiscal affairs of Bucks County, is one of the two Republican candidates for the office of County Commissioner.

Mr. Baker is a resident of Northampton Township and has served as a supervisor of that township since 1915, when he was elected on the Republican ticket to that office. He is a farmer and has successfully conducted a dairy farm business.

His forebears were among the early settlers in Pennsylvania. Peter J. Baker, his great-grandfather, settled in York in 1805, and was a veteran of the War of 1812. The family migrated to Somerset County in the early part of the last century and his father, Jacob Baker, was born in New Lexington, and became a widely-known and prosperous miller.

In addition to his valuable experience as a farmer and businessman, Mr. Baker has been secretary and treasurer of the Bucks County Association of Supervisors for 16 years. Mr. Baker's long service with the supervisors of the county has given him a valuable insight into the many functions of the position he seeks and should be a deciding factor in his favor.

Republican Candidate For JUSTICE OF PEACE Bristol Borough

James Guy, Republican candidate for Justice of Peace in Bristol Borough, was unopposed at the primary election and is now seeking the votes of the Bristol electorate at the general election to be held November 5th.

Mr. Guy is a native of Ireland, having been born in County Tyrone. He and his parents, David and Jane Guy, came to the United States when Mr. Guy was 15 years of age. The Guy family settled in Chester County where the subject of this sketch went to work in a worsted mill. He and his parents moved to Bristol two years later and the candidate for justice of peace has continued to make his residence here ever since.

The well-known Bristol resident was for many years employed in the local industries, and in April 1929, was appointed justice of peace by Governor Fisher. The following year he was elected by the voters of Bristol for a six-year term, and he now seeks re-election.

Mr. Guy has always taken an active interest in local activities and is identified with a number of organizations and societies. He is well-known as a vocalist, and is a member of the Bristol M. E. FARRELL AND WILEY TO DIE WEEK OF NOV. 18

Governor Earle Fixes Date
For Pair Convicted of The Murder of Wm. Weiss

LOSE HIGHER APPEAL

Martin Farrell and Francis Wiley, convicted of the murder of William Weiss, Philadelphia gang figure, last October and whose murder is alleged to have occurred in Bucks County are to go to the electric chair during the week of November 18th. This date was fixed by Governor George H. Earle, yesterday. The men are to be electrocuted at Rockview Penitentiary.

The two desperadoes were tried for the murder and convicted in Doylestown. Both appealed to the Supreme Court, which last Thursday upheld the lower court's verdict.

Farrell and Wiley who participated in the sensational "sewer hole" break from the Eastern State Penitentiary, were members of the Mals-Legenza gang. Mals and Legenza, arrested by Philadelphia police in New York, were executed at Richmond for a previous murder.

Weiss, it was alleged, was kidnapped in Philadelphia and brought to a house in Torresdale Manor where he was kept captive. He was then taken for a ride in a machine and is said to have been killed, his body trussed and tossed off the State Rd. bridge into the Neshaminy Creek. The body was recovered bound in burlap and wired.

JUDGE KELLER WARNS WITNESSES REGARDING PERJURY

States There Was A Lot of Perjury Committed In One Case

CROYDON MAN JAILED

John Dobson Must Pay Costs and Serve Two Months to Three Years

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 23.—Issuing a warning to witnesses who believe they can come to court and spin as many fabrications as they can think up, President Judge Hiram H. Keller, before sentencing John Dobson, of Croydon, said:

"There was a lot of perjury committed in this case and one of these days witnesses will be brought in to answer a charge of perjury."

Dobson, who was convicted of a drunken driving charge by a jury September 19, withdrew his motion for a new trial and was sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution and serve not less than two months nor more than three years in the county prison, Monday.

The defendant and numerous friends of his who served as witnesses testified that he was not operating the car when it collided with another vehicle, but that a "friend" was behind the wheel.

Dobson has been incarcerated in prison here since the trial, being unable to furnish bail.

In the Court of Common Pleas, Mrs. Anna W. A. Raby has filed a libel in divorce against her husband, Herman P. Raby, charging him with desertion. According to the libel, filed in the Prothonotary's office, the libellant and respondent were married February 14, 1912, in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Raby alleges that her husband, who lives at 1631 North Park avenue, Philadelphia, deserted her either in March or April, 1932.

She resides in Springfield township, Bucks County.

German Cardinal Captured After A Month of Freedom

Evading capture for several weeks, the German cardinal owned by Mrs. Michael Petrick, 1505 Wilson avenue, is now back in its own cage at the Petrick home.

The capture of the bird occurred one week ago, after it had enjoyed freedom for a month. During that entire time it remained in the vicinity of the sixth ward, and was frequently seen by neighbors of the Petrick family, who attempted capture by trying to lure the pet into cages. Its whistle was frequently heard, and it seemed wise enough to keep away from the Petrick domicile.

About a week ago a resident of the sixth ward was enabled to capture the pretty bird by quickly placing a window screen over it when the bird alighted on the lawn. It was later placed in a cage, and then taken by Mrs. Petrick to her home.

Several years ago the bird was brought from Germany and presented to Mrs. Petrick by a relative. It has a white breast, gray and black back and tail, and bright red head.

Since its capture the bird refuses to sing, but members of the family are hoping the attractive whistling song will return.

Walker On Way Home

(Copyright, 1935, by I. N. S.)

London, England, Oct. 23.—Jimmy Walker is on his way home. He had that New York look in his eyes and there was that Broadway tilt to his gray felt hat when I met him at the Croydon aerodrome last night when he arrived by plane from Paris. He wants to sail on the Manhattan tomorrow, and he will if private business which he has to transact in London today can be completed. He will be accompanied by his wife, the former Betty Compton, and probably by her mother, Mrs. Compton.

"I have been taking it easy in England and France and other countries getting my health back and now I am feeling so well that there is no reason why I should not get back to New York and to work," Walker said.

"What are you going to do—practise law?"

"That is right," Walker said, "but I don't want to go into detail."

These three sisters are all who survive of a large family, their ages ranging from 60 to 72 years. They remained overnight.

SPOILING THE SOUP

Whether we shall come to a condition where the government is so completely in charge of our lives as to regulate the making of soup for the evening meal is a matter upon which the negative might be upheld more easily than the affirmative. We are a long way from the communal kitchen; it is interesting nevertheless to discover what might happen if we ever come to it.

An incident in Russia, where community kitchens are a reality, indicates a difficulty in carrying out the idea. Two women who, by reason of state arrangements, found it necessary to boil their soup in adjoining kettles, had reached that stage of hatred where hair pulling would have been in order, except that they kept it bobbed too short. They fumed and fussed and spat while the soup boiled and bubbled. One thought to get the best of her enemy by surreptitiously dropping a few cigarettes in the other's soup. In retaliation the recipient of the cigarette broth seasoned her enemy's soup with a handful of moth balls.

At this juncture the government stepped in. It seems that the wrath of the combatants might have terminated in the ultimate expression of extreme or even fatal violence without severe official interruption. But when the community soup was ruined it was a cause for formal action. Food had been destroyed, the government obstructed and one of the seemingly endless series of five-year plans damaged. The women were sent to jail for a year, paying a penalty for a crime whose seriousness is illustrated by comparison with a law of the United States; it was the same penalty that might be invoked against an American farmer for raising too many potatoes!

Roosevelt issues an ukase that some of the new deal activities are henceforth to be brought under the budget. It would be too much to expect, however, that they be brought under the constitution.

With one tax after another piled on the harassed motor industry, it has long puzzled us why the jinx never caught on in this country.

Groundkeepers, preparing a Pennsylvania football field, unearthed a set of teeth. The hunt for the remainder of the fullback is being pressed.

CHAPTER XXV

Julie was looking sleek and well-dressed and very, very pretty in her smart travelling togs. She huddled herself into Stuart's arms and hugged him madly. He lifted her tiny form off the floor and kissed her, whereat she threatened to spoil her make-up by moistening the mascara on her eyelashes with happy tears.

"Julie! You're getting to be a great success! I see your name in the movie news."

"This is my fourth featured part, Stuart! Isn't it swell?"

"They may star her," observed Lucien, with satisfaction. "And I discovered the brat—don't forget that!"

"Let me look at you, darling." She turned Stuart about to the relentless light of the big north window. "You're thin. And you never used to have smudges under your eyes. High life, eh? Well, I've got to starve now, worse than we used to. Got to keep the figure."

She twirled about before Stuart and then ran her hands over her firm little figure. "Not too fat, now, eh, Stuart?"

Lucien glanced quickly toward the open door. "Where's Sharlene?"

"She's out this afternoon. Oh, here comes the beer. Thank you, Brooks."

"Beer! Oh, charming, charming!" burlesqued Julie and drank greedily.

Lucien strolled over to the canvas. "What have we here, Stuart?"

"Ah—something I was just starting. You'll have to watch it grow."

"H'm. . . Well, let's see something you've done since the exhibit."

"I haven't done anything, haven't had time."

Julie caught the half-tones of misery and self-abasement in his excuse. She set down her glass and looked at him anxiously.

"I was afraid of that," said Lucien. "Women—chains—squirrel in a cage—I know!"

The house telephone rang. Stuart answered it.

"Yes, Sharlene. . . Lucien and Julie are here. . . All right." He hung up and turned "Sharlene's coming up."

Lucien launched into an enthusiastic account of the exhibit and what every critic had said. Julie gulped down her beer quickly and then repaired her make-up.

Sharlene came in cordially. "Lucien, I'll never forget what a brick you were, attending to all that business for us! And Julie! What a celebrity you're getting to be!"

"Oh!" said Julie grandly. "I've just happened to have a few good parts." (She pronounced it "pawts.") "Did you have a nice trip?"

"Glorious—of course, Stuart has told you. How about some tea? Oh, I see you're having beer. You still like it best?" looking at Julie, her eyes twinkling.

"I really don't care for it," said Julie, in her best Duchess manner. "It's so fattening! We had such lovely beer in Canada."

"Oh, you've been on a trip, too?" Sharlene was making conversation.

"Location. We're just back in town. You must really pardon my appearance." She patted her perfectly groomed little figure complacently. "It was so dusty in my compartment, y'know."

"Next time," said Lucien, turning to her with a grin, "I'll have the Company send you tourist, if you think that was dusty. Come on, egg—we've got to get going. I haven't been home yet."

Lucien walked with Stuart down the stairs, talking cheerfully about Stuart's past work, trying to encourage him to go ahead in spite of the squirrel cage. "Don't let the gay life get you down, boy—find the time. It's important for you to paint. Everything you produce is worth while—it isn't in you to do a rotten piece of work."

Julie, walking ahead with Sharlene, suddenly grasped her arm, forgetting her Duchess role: "He's darn right! I'm worried sick about Stuart. He looks god-awful! Don't you know he'll die if he doesn't work?"

"Come on, Julie," said Lucien impatiently, coming up to take her arm. He propelled her out the door which Brooks was holding open.

Sharlene was stunned. She said nothing at the time, mechanically smiling the guests off. But she glanced at Stuart as he turned impatiently away to go back upstairs, and she saw that he did look as badly as Julie had said. . . . Later she followed him up to his studio. He was lying motionless on the couch, face down. She was reminded poignantly of the time he lay so on the sand at Waikiki.

She went over to look at the daub on the easel, then around the bare room. The closet door was standing open and she saw the canvas on which he had been slaving for days lying on the floor, cut to pieces. Very hesitantly she approached the still figure on the couch and stood for some time looking down at him.

"Stuart, why can't you work?"

"I—don't feel well." Face still hidden, voice muffled.

"Are you ill, dear?"

"No. . . Too much to eat. . . Too much to drink. . . Too full of—nothing!"

"I—I won't make any more demands on your time, Stuart. I'll keep everybody away. You shall have the simplest food—"

He sat up and looked at her with bloodshot eyes. "I didn't mean that—but there's nothing here!" He pounded his chest. "I've lost it! I—don't care any more! The smell of paint—nauseates me!"

Sharlene stood away from him, frightened at last at what she had but she had let the hectic activity of the summer seize her and take all her time and energy. It had lulled the gnawing ache of regret in her heart, but it had also blinded her as to just what was happening between her and Stuart.

He had changed—he was more taciturn than ever, except when he forced a nervous sort of gaiety on occasion. Then he had a rapid tongue for sarcasm and his blue eyes flamed into mocking restless devils. Sharlene tried to think back to the old Stuart she used to know. It stabbed her to realize how long it had been since she had felt the old warm, pleasant comradeship.

He was ready always at her beck and call. Too ready. A polite stranger—what thoughts was he harboring under that mask?

Thank heaven, she had kept her feelings to herself since coming home, and had not wept on his shoulder as she had in the Orient!

"Beer! Oh, charming, charming!" burlesqued Julie and drank greedily.

done to him in a year's time. . . . After a long pause, she said: "You can go, Stuart, any time you wish."

He got heavily to his feet. "You mean—"

"I mean—I'm not going to hold you here—where you can't work—any longer."

He regarded her somberly. "The Queen commands! Off with his head, eh?"

"Oh, Stuart! I'm only trying to be decent—at last. You've given up a year of your life to stand by me. And it's resulted in this—"

Her hand swept toward the destroyed canvas on the closet floor.

He considered her a long moment, savoring what freedom might mean—toying with a sudden wild hope that perhaps he could prove to himself that he was not a mere "flash in the pan." Then he remembered her plea of a few days ago, that he should stand by her yet a while longer, to spare her scandal. . . . It was little enough to do for her.

"Forgive me, dear," he said. "I've been taking myself too seriously. I thought it was important that I should add to the millions and millions of bad pictures in the world. But it isn't at all. The important thing—" he put his hands on her shoulders—"the important thing is to do up with you tonight and be gay! Let's not be noble. Sharlene, I really don't care! We come this way but once—let's make the most of it! I adore being your Prince Consort!"

It was September before Sharlene paused to think things out. She was cruising about alone in the air one lazy, warm day, with the motor throttled down to a lazy whine—just drifting about over the golden hills. Since that day in Stuart's studio, when she had offered him his freedom and he had refused to take it, she had known that there had to be a reckoning.

Of course, he hadn't meant what he said about not caring any more to paint. . . . And yet, for three months now he had not gone near his studio. She wished to heaven he did want to work—she'd like to be proud of him!

Who wanted a do-nothing for a husband? Oh, Sharlene, for shame! You interfered with his work. . . . You made him take the money. . . .

Stuart hated the money. He hated it because he couldn't support her, himself. He hated the social life that interfered with his art. . . . A remembered flash: "I don't want money—I just want to work." He had meant that! He hadn't asked for her love since they came home. Sharlene's eyes widened and she gasped painfully as she faced the ultimate stark fact: Stuart didn't love her any more. He didn't even like her. . . .

Well, after all, why should he? She had lost something very lovely out of her life. But what had Stuart lost? What had Stuart had? She had taken him away from a life where he was busy and happy—where he was working and accomplishing. And for what? What was that Stuart had said so many times—about watching beside her in the garden. That was a swell life for a man! She wished he had had some happiness out of it. But he was miserable, unhappy. What would bring happiness to him again? He had said it was a by-product of work. Would he be happy again, working?

Well, she had got him into this. It lay in her power to set him free, and give him a chance to go back to his work, his own life, happiness—if he could find it. He would be free of interruptions, free of her money, free of her unwanted presence.

As for herself, she could weather the talk. Other people didn't shrink so from divorce. . . .

THE ROOSEVELT MORTGAGE

Do you know that in 2½ years the Roosevelt Administration has put a public dept on Bucks County 200 times Bucks County's own bonded debt after 2½ centuries as a county?

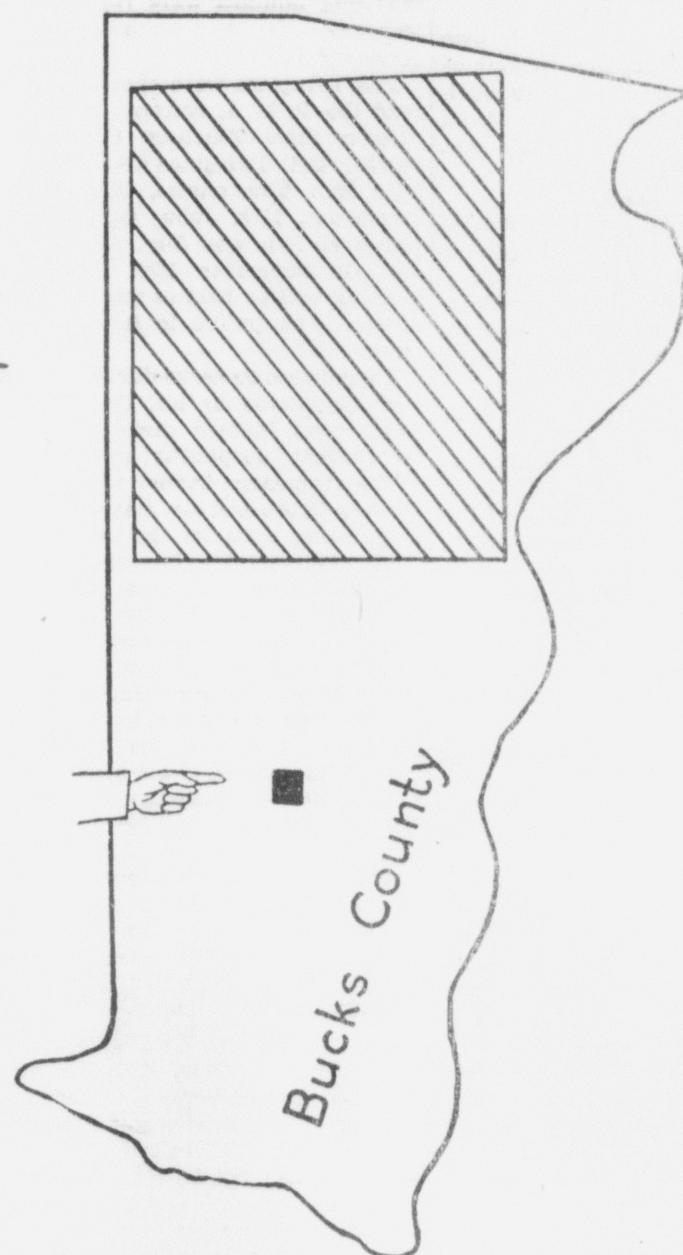

Do you know that this Federal Mortgage on Bucks County amounts to one-third of the County's assessed valuation?

Pennsylvania pays One-Tenth of all Federal Taxes and 1% of the People of Pennsylvania live in Bucks County.

The Roosevelt Mortgage on Bucks County

As Compared With

Bucks County's Own Bonded Indebtedness

To Aug. 31, 1935, the Roosevelt Administration had put this country in hock to the amount of $25,000,000,000 (Twenty-five Thousand Millions)

The portion that Pennsylvania will have to pay is $2,500,000,000 (Twenty-five Hundred Millions)

Bucks County's load, with 1% of the population of Pennsylvania, is $25,000,000

The assessed valuation of Bucks County is $75,000,000

After 250 years as a County, the bonded indebtedness of Bucks County, created by the people of Bucks County, is only $125,000

In Other Words, the Wanton Waste and Extravagance of the Roosevelt Administration, in 2½ Years, Has Loaded Upon the People of Bucks County a Public Debt 200 Times as Great as Bucks County Itself Had at the End of 2½ Centuries.

The assessed valuation of Bucks County is approximately $75,000,000

Bucks County's Share of the Roosevelt Mortgage, Created During the Last 2½ Years, is One-Third of the Assessed Valuation of the County.

THAT IS NEW DEAL FINANCING!

Will you be justified in voting for the candidates on the Democratic county ticket pledged to the policies of the Roosevelt and Earle Administrations, and by such vote place the political prestige of Bucks County behind such destructive financial policies?

Do you approve of fiscal programs which will put further back-breaking burdens of taxation, not only upon yourself, but upon the generations to come?

IF NOT, VOTE THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

COLORED GRID TEAM TO PLAY HERE SUNDAY

(By Jack Orr)
Coach "Glee" Dougherty of the Bristol Recreation eleven has called a practice for this evening to prepare for the toughest tilt of the season, thus far. The "Recs" will tackle the strong and heavy Frankford Black Giants club.

The Black Giants are one of the toughest colored teams in the city and will be traveling to Bristol on Sunday to stop the winning streak of the homesters. This will be the first time in many years that an all-colored gridiron team has appeared in this town. Manager "Eddie" McDevitt confesses that he had many difficulties in getting the Giants on the locals' schedule.

Coach Dougherty says he will put the "Recs" through a stiff workout this evening, stressing the need of pass defense which appeared so weak last week.

The Recreation team is riding on the crest of a three-game winning streak and they are confident that they will keep their unscathed record intact as well as their streak of triumphs.

BRISTOL BOWLING CLUB WINS FROM HARRIMAN

In the Bristol Bowling League, B. B. C. won all four points from Harriman. R. Ratcliffe had 594 and McDevitt 542 for high scores.

In the American League, Lincoln Cafe won all four points from Fleetwings. Monaco with 513 and Yeagle 461 were high men.

In the National League, A. O. H. and Harriman split the points, each getting two. Milligan and Berry each had 480 for their respective teams.

In the Federal League, Madison continued to win by taking four points from Spencer Furniture Co. Morris with 512 was high man, and W. Spencer had 494.

"Seen Through A Sportsman's Eye"

The losing streak of Young Tally the ringman, who made such a remarkable start, has started the fans wondering if he is not afflicted with the same disease the University of Pennsylvania's football club was—that is, before the game on Saturday. Before this contest the Red and Blue were given the sobriquet of "First half champs and second half chumps." It occurs to the Old Sportsman that maybe Tally's opponents have something to do with it. Let's hope that the local slugger will come out of it the same way the Penn club did.

That was some grab of "Glee" Dougherty's on Sunday. Jole Roe threw a bullet-like toss to Doc and George jumped high in the air to snag it from mid-air. Doc is playing great ball for the Recreation club, but that catch of Dougherty's, according to reports from Leedom's, was the most spectacular play of the current campaign.

We were told by one of the high school lads that "Bill" Dougherty, head coach at Bristol High, gave the official at the Cheltenham match a "piece of his mind." And after receiving some real bad breaks from the partisan officials in the first half, the story was a bit different in the latter half. Good work, Bill, but maybe you should have talked to those referees before the game.

Another bit of information we garnered from this high school boy was that those Cheltenham tacklers were well coached in the art of tackling the ball. To those who are not so well up on the jargon of the sport we will further state that this means pulling the arm of the ball-carrier in such a manner that the runner is forced to drop the pigskin, thus giving tackler and his teammates an opportunity to recover.

We dropped over on the St. Ann's match on Sunday and saw a former high school lad furnish the power for the Purple and Gold's victory over Harrington A. A. The lad was a parkplug in the Saints' attack with his long, bullet-like passes.

It seems as if one of those articles about the Cheltenham-Bristol contest on Friday, in the city papers, got their signals crossed. The writer tagged a monicker on the club, calling them "Lions" instead of "Bunnies." That seemed to be the only compliment paid to the visitors all day by all those journals in the big city.

Another little bit we picked up in a chat with H. S. member was that each Bill Dougherty went over to congratulate "Dutch" Lehman (by the way, scribe at the High School, it's Dutch Lehman and not Butch Leiper), and Lehman was in an angry mood. Little Bristol holding a big Cheltenham eleven to a 6-0 score," he was raging. Dougherty, it is reported, shook hands with the Panther coach and walked out.

A comparison of the officiating at the football games locally, seems to give the High School the edge by virtue of their employing P. I. A. A. men. The Saints seem to have the next best boys on the job, while the boys down at Leedom's, we are told, are allowed to push each other around the lot, all getting by the officials, down there. An onion to those refs down there.

BENSALEM VARSITY HOLDS PEMBERTON TO TIE SCORE

The Bensalem varsity journeyed to Pemberton on Friday and played the Black and Gold to a 6-0 tie. The Blue and Grey clearly outplayed the Pemberton eleven throughout the game. The Blue and Grey gridgers scored nine first downs to Pemberton's three, but lacked the offensive punch to push the ball over.

On one occasion Bensalem penetrated to Pemberton's 10-yard line only to lose the ball on a fumble, and again late in the fourth quarter they pushed to the three yard line, where two plays failed to push the pigskin over. The game ended shortly thereafter.

Pemberton, undefeated and untied to this game, showed a well balanced team with their long passes always being dangerous. On Saturday the Bensalem eleven will meet the Cheltenham Junior Varsity on Bensalem's field at 2:30 p. m.

PHILLIES' SCOUT TELLS OF BASEBALL'S ADVANCE

The initial movement to instill the spirit of sportsmanship in the public of this borough was started last night, as Bristol Council, Knights of Columbus, held a "Sports Night" affair in their club-house on Radcliffe street. Invitations were extended to organizations in Bristol and the public in general and the meeting hall was packed to capacity before the affair opened.

The speaker for the occasion was Joseph O'Rourke, scout for the Phillies, of the National League. O'Rourke does most of the buying and selling for the National League club and has the final say on deals contemplated by the officials. He played in the majors about 30 years ago.

O'Rourke claims that baseball today is much faster than in former years. The reason he advanced for this is that the baseball is much livelier. Old-time ball players could do tricks with the ball in those days, but today it is a different game.

"You have read in newspapers about the playing ability of Tris Speaker, Hooper and other outfielders in the old day. They were great because they could play in close and shoot the ball in to get runners and also could go back after flies behind them, stated the scout.

Phillies' scout, "But today when you have small men like Dickie Bartell and Eric McNair hitting them 308 feet or so, it is hardly possible to throw out runners because the outfielders must play deep."

Continuing the speaker said, "Any youth who has an opportunity to participate in sports should do it, but there is no sport that has more opportunities to commercialize than baseball. All a fellow needs to make the grade is a little ability, a little push, and a little stomach which we call 'guts.'"

O'Rourke advised the younger fellows to listen to the advice given them by players who have played the game and explained the system his club is using to break in young ball players in Philadelphia and vicinity.

Before closing, O'Rourke told the gathering that the Phillies are planning but one deal this winter, despite the fact that newspapers are printing stories contrary to that. He believes that the Phillies will be in there next season from the start.

The entertainment committee presented a varied program for the gathering. John Ennis acted as master of ceremonies and sang by special request "Memories." John Dougherty played harmonica selections. Joseph Bracco gave an exhibition of tap dancing. Song selections were given by Tony Gallagher, Al Powell, Sam Russell, Gaven White, Edward Christy, Ray Luber, and the Century Quartet. Accompanists were: Elmer Lang, piano; Jon Steffen, violin.

Committeemen in charge of the affair were: Thomas C. Clarke, chairman; James Slater, William Elmer, James Roche, and James Blanche. The next gather will be held in January with the following speakers being present: Marty Brill, Tommy Rielly, Jim Henry, Len Tanseer and Harry Stuhldreher.
